2018 Paris Meeting

Wednesday 04 July 2018
Pavillon d'Armenonville, Paris

Roland Ries,
President of
Cités Unies France

In a changing international context, Cités Unies France has developed a new strategy, with three main objectives: develop our proximity with the French local authorities, reinforce the platform of services for our members and increase the visibility of our actions.

We invite you to our annual Paris Meeting, that will focus on a few key questions "How can local and regional authorities cope with the new challenges of a globalized world, and its accelerating urbanization? What is our vision on the international action of local authorities for 2030? What will be our common approach to the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and what will be our strategies?"

I am convinced that the international issues we face today (climate change, migrations, inequalities, etc.) cannot be treated without a collective response, which implies working locally and involving citizens. Our international action has to renew itself and adapt to both the constrained budget framework and the need of internationalization of our towns, cities and regions.

Come and share your experience with us! This year, the meeting will honor Latin America.

I look forward to meeting you on the 4th of July, in Paris, together with the French and foreign local authorities, as well as the public and private partners of Cités Unies France. Let's make this meeting a moment of imagination and co-create tomorrow's international action of local authorities!

Roland Ries,
Mayor of Strasbourg
